

ACCOUNTING LAW

Regulations Adopted by State Board of Accounts.

The state board of accounts has adopted the forms which will be used by the public accounting board, which will begin its work January 1. The board of accounts has provided forty-one different forms, which they have placed in the hands of the State printer, who will prepare samples for immediate distributions. No attempt to introduce a uniform system in the state institutions will be made for several months, and the only form decided on thus far for the state is the blank for reports by public depositories.

The forty-one forms which have been completed are classified as to corporation into county, township, city, state and school city. The board will furnish each of the divisions with an approved blank which shall be made out and filed with the state examiner. Each department will be required to give the information concerning the records kept by them, and it is believed that errors and wilful mistakes will thus be eliminated in public offices. Practically every department must make a minute statement of all the money received and expended.

One of the new forms, which is of especial interest is for reporting fines and forfeitures imposed and paid to the auditor of the state. The purpose in requiring these reports is that the auditor, who is custodian of the common school fund, into which all moneys collected for fines and forfeitures are paid, may be able to keep in touch with the condition of this part of the fund. It will be his business to keep a debit and credit account with all justices of the peace, city judges, mayors acting as city judges, and clerks of circuit courts concerning all fines and forfeitures. This plan, it is believed will do away with the practice said to be common among the lesser judiciary of imposing fines and dismissing cases when the costs have been paid, as well as to correct the more common evil of permitting a fine to be stayed and forgetting about it afterward, as is often done in cities where politics is permitted to interfere with the operation of the police courts. By giving the auditor of state a check on these courts, the board hopes to be able to collect all fines imposed.

The members of the public accounting board were appointed by the Governor in compliance with a law enacted by the last legislature. They have been working for some time upon a plan of public accounting, and have had difficulty in formulating a system which would be uniform in all localities. The forms completed by the board by no means exhaust the list originally contemplated, but are sufficient to set the uniform accounting and bookkeeping contemplated by the law in practical operation January 1.

To Speak in Scott County.

Mr. Powers, the temperance lecturer, who assisted in the local option campaign in this county and in several other Indiana counties, passed through the city this morning enroute to Scott county where he will speak almost every night from now till the election next Tuesday. Mr. Powers has a pleasing address and his work is very effective in the temperance cause. He is also a lecturer of some reputation along other lines.

NO APPOINTMENTS

Mayor-elect Swope Has Several Applications For Offices.

During the past few weeks there has been much speculation as to who will be selected by the newly elected city officials for the appointive offices. Prior to the election it was rumored that several different men would be appointed to the various offices if certain candidates were elected, but none of these reports were verified by the candidates themselves.

According to the law of 1909 the city mayor has the authority to appoint the city engineer, chief of police, chief of the fire department, street commissioner and the three members of the board of health. This is somewhat different from the present system of filling the appointive offices, as most of the appointees are now named by the city council.

In some of the neighboring cities the entire list of appointments has been made, but in Seymour not a single officer has been named. Mayor-elect Swope has received several applications for each of the offices, which by law he may fill, but has not yet decided upon the appointees. He stated yesterday that before any appointments, whatever, were made, he intended to look over the ground thoroughly and select the men who, by their individual qualifications are best fitted for the places. None of the new councilmen have yet publicly expressed their choice for the councilmanic boards and committees, and there has been no official intimation as to who will be appointed.

It is thought that no appointments will be definitely decided upon for several weeks and the successful candidates may not be named before the first of January, when the newly elected officials will enter upon their duties.

Injured In Runaway.

Mrs. Hannah Rebber, who resides four miles south of Dudleytown, was seriously injured in a runaway at R. R. Short's crossing about two o'clock this afternoon.

She was driving with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William Rebber and saw a car approaching just as they were driving on the track. The old lady was left in the buggy to hold the lines while her companion got out to hold the bridle.

The horse turned short and threw the old lady out. She struck on her head and shoulders. Her collar bone was broken and she received other injuries. She was brought to Seymour on the traction car.

MRS. STETSON'S FATE

Now in the Hands of the Directors of the "Mother Church."

Boston, Nov. 16.—The admonished leader of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York, Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, appeared before the board of directors of the mother church in this city yesterday for the purpose, it is understood, of explaining the acts of contumacy alleged against her and the board of directors of the New York church.

There was a session lasting almost six hours at the mother church during the day and again at night another session was held. The night session continued until a late hour. No information regarding either the day or the night conference was given out, nor was it definitely ascertained whether Mrs. Stetson was present at night. There was a rumor in circulation that she had gone to Newton to see Mrs. Eddy, but this could not be confirmed.

Officially no statement from Christian Science sources as to just what is going on between Mrs. Stetson and the directors was forthcoming. While the general public opinion is that the excommunicating of Mrs. Stetson is practically inevitable, it is hoped by some of the prominent members of the mother church that this may be avoided. They say also that such is the hope of the directors themselves.

BIG DEAL

Property Valued at $21,000 Changes Hands.

E. C. Bollinger, as agent has sold the John H. Stewart property on east Third street, together with the livery and feed barn to James A. Willey. The deal involves property and money to the value of $21,000, and is one of the largest that has been made for several months.

The Stewart property which has a frontage of 107 feet on Third street, and has upon it a big three story brick barn, was valued at $13,000. Mr. Stewart takes in exchange the farm of Mr. Willey's, which is located about ten miles southeast of Seymour and $5000 in cash. The farm, which is in Jennings county contains about 166 acres.

Mr. Willey is well known in Seymour having been a resident of this city until a few years ago when he moved to his farm. He was engaged in the transfer business for about twenty-five years, which he sold to George Niehaus. He has many friends here and will command his share of the livery business in Seymour.

Mr. Stewart has been in the livery business for several years and has built up a good trade by his fair and courteous treatment. He will probably move on his newly purchased farm within a few months. Mr. Willey takes charge of his new business December 1.

Petit Jurors.

The Jury commissioners met in regular session yesterday morning and selected the following persons for the petit jury for the November term of Court which will convene Monday:

More, Jackson, Albert DeLong, Salt Creek, Herman Stahl, Grassyfork, Adam Denny, Salt Creek, J. C. Hinderlider, Carr, Holmes Robertson, Hamilton, Henry Eggersman, Brownstown, Joe White, Jackson, W. P. Carpenter, Vernon and Nick Deppert, Redding.

Census Statistics.

The work of the census takers in 1910 will be a greater task and require the services of more men than ever before. Several new sets of statistics are to be compiled in the next census reports.

One of the things that Uncle Sam is determined to find out next year is just how many egg producers there are in this country, and every city, village or county poultry farm whose annual outputs exceeds $200 in value, will be called upon to declare not only the number of eggs they lay, but must divide the matter into two sections—those under three months old and those over.

Grammer Store Burned.

The general store owned by Edward Long at Grammer was totally destroyed by fire about 3:00 o'clock Monday morning, and the people of the town believe that three burglars who intended robbing the safe, are responsible for the fire. Three men were seen running from the rear of the store as the blaze burst out, but the neighbors were frightened and did not recognize any of the men. The entire population of the town turned out to fight the fire and succeeded in saving the adjoining buildings.

The people in the telephone exchange which is located across the street from the Long store, were awakened by the explosion and saw a small light moving in the building. The operator started to call some of the neighbors and in ringing a neighbor the bell in the store also rang because the telephone there is on a party line. As soon as the telephone jingled in the store the mysterious light went out. People who had been called by the telephone operator started for the store as soon as they could dress and some of them saw three men running from the rear of the building. The men seemed to have their arms full of things taken.

The loss was about $3000 with $2000 insurance. Mr. Long is well known in Seymour and has many friends here.

Visits Old Home.

Nicholas J. Lux, of Claremore, Oklahoma, arrived here this morning from Ludington, Mich., where he and Mrs. Lux have been spending some time with her sister. She will join him here in a few days and they will spend two or three weeks here visiting his brother-in-law, Joseph Stein and family, and other relatives. Mr. Lux formerly lived here and worked in a restaurant at the old O. & M., depot which stood where the watchman's shanty now stands near the New Lynn Hotel. He left here about twenty years ago and has spent most of the time since in the west and southwest. He was in Seymour about seven years ago and spent about two or three days here at the time of her mother's illness. He is well pleased with Oklahoma and says that he finds things very much changed in Seymour. The city has increased about fifty per cent in population since he left here in the latter part of the 80's.

Rev. Felix Demunbrun, who resides near Conlogue, spent a few hours in the city this morning. While he has been retired from active ministerial work for some time he still preaches some at times and will go to Vevay, one of his former appointments, in a few weeks to assist in conducting a series of meetings.

DIED.

McGOVERN — Mrs. Elizabeth McGovern died of cancer, at her home on east Third street about 6 o'clock this morning.

She had been afflicted with cancer for almost a year and a half and for the last six months had been practically an invalid. The deceased was a native of Jackson county and was fifty-eight years of age, having been born July 28, 1850. She had been a life long member of the St. Paul church and was a woman of excellent qualities. She had a large acquaintance and many friends. She is survived by one son Walter, of Seymour, and a brother Henry Nayrocker, of Jackson county.

TROWBRIDGE — Mrs. Buell Trowbridge, an aged lady of Brownstown, died Sunday of consumption. She is survived by a husband, two sons and a sister.

William Owen Here.

William Owen, the Shakespearean actor, addressed the high school this morning. Quite a number of visitors were present, and his talk was greatly enjoyed. He appeared in "Merchants of Venice" this afternoon at 3:30 and to-night will take the part of "Orlando" in the play, "As You Like It." Mr. Owen comes well recommended and is being enthusiastically received. The people of Seymour are not often given an opportunity of seeing a Shakespeare play here and many will take advantage of this opportunity. Mr. Owen played before an appreciative audience at Washington last night. The advance sale for seats is large. About 20 were sold to Cortland people, 15 to Medora and a large number to Brownstown.

Baptist S. S. Social.

A Sunday School social will be given at the First Baptist church Thursday evening of this week. Mrs. L. B. Hill's class has charge of the arrangements. An enjoyable program has been arranged which will begin at 7:30 followed by a social time with light refreshments. Some interesting features are promised for the social hour. This is not to be a money making affair. It costs nothing to attend and there will be no chance to spend any money while there. It is to be just what it's name indicates—a Sunday School social and every member of the school, their families and their friends are invited to come and enjoy the evening. You and your friends will be welcome.

TROUBLE BREWING

The Mining Wage Issue Again Up in Pennsylvania.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—The operators are already making preparations to force an issue upon the miners that may result in another great national conflict in which the miners assert 250,000 miners will join, although the working agreement between the bituminous coal operators and United Mine Workers of America does not expire until next April.

The association of bituminous coal operators in central Pennsylvania has held several quiet meetings and discussed matters that are creating considerable uneasiness in the miners' camp. It has leaked out that many independent operators have attended these sessions and every effort is being made to strengthen the association to inaugurate a combined movement to reduce wages next spring.

The operators claim that there is an insufficient margin of profit for them at the present market price of coal for which they are compelled to pay 66 cents a ton for mining, and they demand that the miners accept a "reasonable" reduction without having agreed among themselves upon the proposed cut.

On their part the miners are resolutely settling their faces against any reduction in wages. They claim that, owing to the slackness of work and present low wages they are barely able to make a living for themselves and families.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bollinger and daughter, Lorita Mae, went to Indianapolis this afternoon to attend the wedding of Miss Nellie Jordan to Mr. Thomas Eckert, which will occur at Indianapolis Wednesday morning. Miss Jordan is a cousin of Mrs. Bollinger. She has visited in Seymour frequently and made a number of acquaintances here.

William Burkdaal was taken to the Central hospital at Indianapolis this morning by Sheriff Jerry McOsker and Chief Moritz.

NATIONAL FLORAL EMBLEMS.

How Ireland's Shamrock and Scotland's Thistle Were Chosen.

The flower of our country is popularly supposed to be the goldenrod, says the New York Herald. Some years ago when the choice of a national flower was left for the children in the public schools to decide by vote the choice fell to the wild rose. But nine people out of every ten would tell you that the goldenrod was the one decided upon, and that flower is perhaps best suited for the purpose, for it abounds in all parts of the United States and is rarely found in any other country.

In England in the fourteenth century the national flower was the broom, or planta genista. It was not till the reign of Henry VI. that the national emblem came to be the rose.

The story of Ireland's shamrock is a very pretty one. St. Patrick was one day preaching at Tara trying to explain the doctrine of the trinity. Plucking a shamrock which was peeping up through the turf at his feet, he said, "Do you not see these three leaves on the one stalk? Such is the doctrine of the great three in one." From that time the shamrock was the national emblem of Ireland.

The tale of the Scotch thistle is a very different one. In the reign of Malcolm, in the year 1010, the Danes swooped down upon the coast of Aberdeenshire by night, intending to surround and storm the great fortress of Staines. The first installment crept up barefooted and dropped into the moat, but they found they were not in water at all. The moat was dry and covered with a great growth of thistles, which stung their unprotected feet and caused them to cry out unmercifully. The sound roused the sentinels and in a moment a volley was fired upon the Danes, who broke and fled. From this fact the thistle was given its high place in the esteem of the Scotchmen.

France is the only country which allows a flower to appear in its national heraldry. But the fleur-de-lis, or three lilies, is so different from most flowers that it does not seem out of place on the national coat of arms. Canada has adopted the scarlet maple leaf, which makes miles of her woods blaze in autumn. The Japanese have the chrysanthemum, and fittingly, too, for the island is the birthplace of this gorgeous flower. From earliest time Greece has had the fragrant narcissus and the pomegranate blossom has been the floral emblem of Spain. Switzerland claims that flower most difficult of all to pick, the edelweiss.

SMOKING IS A TASK.

Effort Required to Dispose of Twenty Cigars a Day.

"I have a customer who thinks he smokes twenty cigars a day," said a dealer. "As a matter of fact, he gives away many of them and throws away some that are only partly consumed. However, he is firm in the belief that he smokes more actual tobacco than any man in town, and a boast on the subject in my store recently led to a curious bet. He declared, to begin with, that he could smoke three ordinary cigars in half an hour.

"A bystander remarked that no man alive could smoke even one cigar continuously until it was consumed without taking it from his lips. 'Bosh!' said the man; 'I do that right along, and think nothing of it.' 'I'll bet you a box of perfectos you can't do it right now,' said the other, and in half a minute the wager was made. By its terms the cigar was to be consumed in steady, conservative puffs, and not removed from the lips until burned to a mark one and a half inches from the tip.

"A clear Havana Colorado maduro was selected for the test, and the smoker took a seat and began. He puffed like an engine for about two minutes and accumulated something under half an inch of ash, and then he began to wobble. He shifted the cigar from side to side, pulled slow and fast, and seemed to have difficulty getting his breath between the draws. At any rate, he kept turning his head to avoid the smoke, and finally got to laughing.

"I could see he was in torture, but he stuck to it until he got within half an inch of the mark. Then he jumped up suddenly, threw the cigar away, and walked out of the shop.

"I paid the bet and charged it to his account, and he told me later that the very idea of tobacco made him sick. I doubt whether it would be possible for anybody to smoke even a moderately strong cigar through in the manner I have described."

GETTING OUT THE TIMBER.

How Woodsmen Worked in Forests in the Early Days.

The woodsmen went into the camp in the fall to stay during the winter in earlier times, the facilities of getting out being limited and in marked contrast to those of later days when the pine regions were threaded with iron rails. The woodsmen were fed well, says a writer in the Pilgrim, because they were expected to work hard, drones not being tolerated, and to do good work plenty of "grub" was required. The bill of fare of an average camp consisted of pork and beef, potatoes, beans, bread, dried apple sauce, tea, molasses and occasionally cabbage, onions and other vegetables.

The camps built, all hands were set to work at building roads over which the logs were to be hauled from the timber in the vicinity of the camp to the river and cutting and skidding the logs. The modus operandi was simple. The choppers cut down the tree and trimmed off the limbs, then the sawyers cut it into such lengths as could be best handled, twelve, fourteen, sixteen or eighteen feet, and the logs were then hauled by teams to some convenient point on the road and skidded up in piles ready for the sleighs when the snow came. The effort was to get as many logs skidded as possible before the deep snows came to interfere with handling them advantageously.

When winter came on the logs were loaded on wide sleighs and hauled over ice roads to the river, where they were banked and scaled and on the end of each log was stamped the mark of the owner, this being done with a marking iron.

In the short winter days the woods were lively enough, the work being pushed while daylight lasted. In the evening came the care of the horses and cattle, then supper for the men and the real enjoyment that comes from strenuous endeavor. With appetites whetted with the hardest of work from early dawn to the shades of night a camp force of sixty men would mow away a stock of provisions that would appall the dyspeptic city man, and then the men gathered around the bright camp-fires and stories, songs, the incidents of the day's work, etc., were gone over, the atmosphere grew hazy with the smoke of many pipes and by 9 o'clock the tired men were stretched out in their bunks slumbering as only those can whose days are hardened with toil and whose brains are not racked with problems of finance or scientific investigation—the sleep that comes to the strong, the rugged and healthy.

The Naked World Beyond.

Prof. William James, of Harvard, has been talking with his old friend, Dr. Hodgson. The conversation is remarkable not only for what Hodgson had to say, but also for the fact that he has been dead for four years, and that the conversation was conducted through Mrs. Piper, the well-known medium. Professor James is not quite sure whether he was talking with Dr. Hodgson or only a counterfeited, but he tells the whole story in the "Proceedings of the American Society for Psychical Research."

It seems that Professor James and Mrs. James were present at Mrs. Piper's sitting, when Dr. Hodgson dropped in casually to make a call.

"Well, well, well," said the deceased Hodgson, who seems to be a jovial sort of spook; "I am delighted."

After some talk which could not exactly be called spiritual, the conversation drifted around to the subject of the world beyond.

"Do you live as men do?" asked Professor James.

"Do you wear clothing?" asked Mrs. James, who, being a woman, is interested in such matters, "and live in houses?"

"Oh, yes, houses," replied the visiting spirit, "but not clothing. No, that is absurd."

When pressed for details about the naked world beyond, Dr. Hodgson's ghost tactfully changed the subject.

Professor James is an eminent psychologist and a learned man, but, like most of us, he has lingering doubts about the genuineness of such conversations with the other world.—Success Magazine.

Everybody Was Happy.

Too many "international" marriages are made upon a strictly commercial basis, and in such cases it often happens, as in the story attributed by the Washington Star to Mr. Carnegie, that the bride couple are not the ones most deeply moved by the sound of the wedding bells.

"Was it a happy marriage?" Mr. Carnegie asked the cynic who told him of it.

"Oh, quite," said he. "The bride was happy, her mother overjoyed. Lord Lacland was in ecstasies, and his creditors, I understand, were in a state of absolutely delirious and uncontrollable bliss."

To the Ladies.

Here's to the garden of Eden, Which Adam was always a weedin' Till Eve by mistake Got bit by a snake, Who on the ripe pippins was feedin'. Then a longin' it seemed to possess her For clothing sufficient to dress her, And ever since then It's been up to us men To pay for the dresses. God bless her! —Dayton Herald.

"Frequently," answered Miss Cayenne. "But he almost invariably snubs them."—Washington Star.

DOG AND HORSE.

It was the morning hour in a European circus—one of the permanent circuses, where performances are conducted all the year round under a roof instead of under the traveling canvas dome with which American circuses are familiar. In the ring a horse trainer was teaching a young horse some new tricks, but what most interested the American newspaper man who had made the trainer's acquaintance was the activity of a big white bulldog.

As the horse ran round the ring, the dog kept just in front of it, dexterously avoiding the horse's hoofs, and evidently feeling that its assistance was a great help to its master.

"Your dog seems to like this sort of thing as much as you do," remarked the visitor, when the horse had been led away and the trainer had leisure for conversation.

"Beppo? Ah, yes. He is of more importance than myself in his own opinion. Eh, boy?" and the man leaned over to pat the dog's head. "And he is not so far wrong, perhaps," he added.

"How so?" asked the visitor.

"A dog's intelligence," said the trainer, "is far different from that of the horse. The horse has no ideas. He learns simply that if he does so and so he gets a mouthful of carrots. But the dog observes. So with Beppo. You have noticed that he is always at the head of the horse while I teach her to run in a circle?"

"Yes."

"That is not merely because Beppo like to run. If you watch closely you will see that he is making the horse to run in a circle. I did not teach him to do it, but by watching me he teaches himself that, and many other things. When, for example, the horse is obstinate and will not mind promptly, Beppo will nip her legs and make her quite uncomfortable. But when the horse is good and minds splendidly, ah! then you will see him leap high in the air and kiss her with his tongue. That is his intelligence."

"And you have never taught him to help you?"

"It is of his own volition and for no other reward than the word of approval. He is not like the horse, that must always be paid with carrots or sugar. Is it not so, Beppo?"

And the white bulldog sat up like a soldier and barked an affirmative.

Another International Crisis.

While patrolling his beat in the small hours of a recent morning, says the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, an officer beheld a suspicious-looking little figure shuffling along in the shadows, bearing a bundle.

"Looka here," said the officer, halting the wanderer; "where are yez goin'?"

"Me go home," was the short reply. "Where did yez come from?"

"Nort' 'Ighland," grunted the little chap.

"North is Ireland? Indade an' yez did not," declared the officer. "What is yer name?"

"Tara Kakata."

Just at that moment a well-dressed couple arrived on the scene.

"Why, it is our Japanese servant!" exclaimed the woman. "He is carrying home our fancy dress costumes," she explained. "He is all right, officer."

"Oh, he's all right," said the officer, releasing him reluctantly. "Well, thin, what 'th' devil does he mane by tellin' me he's from th' North 'Ireland an' his name is Terry McCarty?"

THREE NIGHTS IN A CREVASSE.

Terrible Experience of Three German Climbers on the Jungfrau.

The adventures of three young Germans on the Jungfrau have been the topic of much discussion and the cause of great anxiety at Grindelwald. A few days ago, says the Pall Mall Gazette, the three young men, two of whom have had considerable Alpine experience, while the third, an Alsatian, was a novice, started without a guide to make one more of those foolish attempts at a big climb unaided which have been so common and so fatal this season.

Leaving Lauterbrunnen in the afternoon, they passed the night at the Rottal cabin. A storm, however, overtook them on the way up, a signal of danger which no prudent Alpinist would have failed to profit by. At 2 o'clock the next morning, though bad weather was threatening, they resumed their march. The Alsatian was already showing signs of distress, but refused to go back or to listen to the advice of his more experienced companions. Three hours afterward a blinding snowstorm broke over them, rendering progress both dangerous and difficult and blotting out all signs of the track and landmarks. Plodding doggedly on, however, the trio managed to reach the Silberhorn slopes, a little below the summit, where they were compelled to pass the night.

Shelter was difficult to find and their position appeared desperate when one of the party noticed that a crevasse near at hand appeared to terminate at a depth of some twenty feet. Carefully roping himself, one of the party was lowered over the edge and found that there was sufficient space and excellent shelter at the bottom. By firmly wedging their ice axes into the ice his companions were able to lower themselves also, and in this confined space, walled in by solid ice and in imminent danger from falling ice above, the night was spent.

Fortunately a small stove and a good supply of eatables formed part of the climbers' equipment, and the hot coffee which they were enabled to brew probably was the means of saving their lives. Huddled together and almost frozen, the three waited for dawn. The snow, however, still fell pitilessly all next day and the day following; progress or retreat was impossible and a second night and then a third had to be faced in the icy shelter.

The Alsatian, unable to stand the bitter cold, began to complain of severe pains in his feet, a well-known sign of evil omen among snow-climbers. Next morning his two companions emerged from their refuge to find the weather still and clear and completed the ascent, returning to find their companion evidently in great pain and quite unable to move. The two others thereupon set off for the Concordia hut, half leading and half carrying their unfortunate comrade. There the half-frozen man was left while one of his friends hastened down to the Eggishorn hotel. A relief party was at once sent out and with great difficulty the sufferer was borne down to the hotel. Both his feet were frozen and his condition for some time caused the greatest anxiety.

Meantime, from the Lauterbrunnen side, search parties were at work hunting for the missing man, who it was believed could not have lived through three days of such weather on the icy heights of the Jungfrau. It is said to be the first time that a climbing party has ever emerged safely from so prolonged a stay below the surface of the glacier ice.

The Perfectly Proper Lady.

She was always very proper in a highly proper way.

She could not forgive a woman who would ride a horse astride; She would never show her ankles on a rainy, sloppy day.

In her very proper mode of life she took a proper pride;

She would never think of looking at a man the second time

If a formal introduction had not taken place before;

In her solemn, sober judgment flirting was an awful crime,

And she blushed to even think about the underclothes she wore.

She was always highly proper in her manners and her dress,

It shocked her to hear people speak about the "naked truth";

In her opinion chairs had "limbs"; it gave her deep distress

To think that men could sometimes be immodest and uncouth,

When the doctor asked to see her tongue she very nearly swooned,

She was always on the lookout for a shock where'er she went;

Because of what composed the strings whereby the thing was tuned

She thought the violin was not a proper instrument.

She often said if angels wore no clothing in the skies

She hoped she wouldn't have to go to heaven when she died;

She preferred some lonely planet where, with plenty of supplies,

She might in decent raiment be possessed of proper pride;

But the night the conflagration started in the flat next door

She forgot that being proper was the only thing worth while,

And was carried down a ladder from about the seventh floor

With nothing much upon her but a mighty thankful smile.

Jelly Lane.

As I walked down through Jelly Lane, Went winding through its curves, The road was lined with every kind Of jellies and preserves.

O, there were pots of apricots, And candied fruits displayed, And there was peach within my reach And orange marmalade, And piles and piles and miles and miles

Of citron, quince, and grape Upon the grass in jars of glass Of every size and shape.

The sirup rills and ginger hills The raspberry jam and plum, And cherries canned on either hand Seemed glad to have me come.

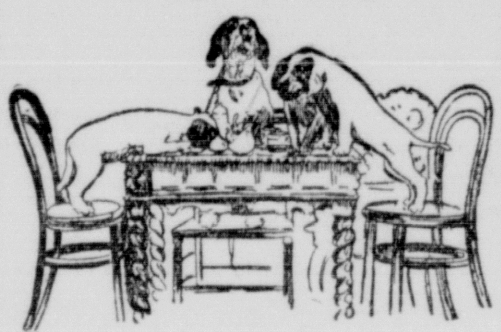

I like to walk in Jelly Lane, Where everything is sweet,

And take my fill of all until I wish no more to eat.

And though each day I come away And feel a little pain,

Yet when I'm rich a tent I'll pitch, And live in Jelly Lane.

A Dog's Tea Party.

Ears for Eyes.

Aunt Ruth, Bertha and Alice were on the piazza, busy with needlework. Carl and Norton were lounging near.

"Oh, put up your work—do! I want a game of some sort," pleaded Norton.

"This mat never will be done if I don't hurry up," replied Alice.

"Shut your eyes, Norton," said Aunt Ruth, "and tell us what you hear."

"Is it a game?"

"I'll leave that for you to say, when we have all tried it," laughingly said his aunt.

"Well," began Norton, as his eyes went together, "I think I hear wheels down the road. Yes, they are coming nearer. Shall I open my eyes now?"

"Wait a minute! Tell us what the wheels are on."

"Why, a wagon of some sort. I guess it's a grocery team—I don't hear it now."

"Where has it stopped?"

"Down the street somewhere—maybe at the Braces'."

The others laughed.

"Oh, that's no fair! I'm going to open my eyes—why, I thought it was nearer than that! And it isn't a grocery wagon! It is Mrs. Parker's father, with his double carriage!"

"Let me try it!" cried Bertha.

But she mistook a furniture van for an ice-cart, and there was a call for Aunt Ruth to play the part of guesser.

She laid her embroidery in her lap, shut her eyes, and listened.

"Mr. Wilson's horse has just turned the corner of Hubbard street," she presently announced.

"Why-ee! How could you tell?" gasped Norton.

"I know his step," said Alice.

"If you will listen to various horses, you will find that their steps differ as much as people's. But here comes a doctor's carriage!" said Aunt Ruth, her eyes still shut. "I think it must be Dr. Post, going to see the Higby baby—yes, he has stopped there. Am I right?"

"Exactly!" responded Carl. "But how in the world do you do it?"

"I wasn't sure until he stopped; but as I heard only the horse's hoofs, I knew it must be a rubber-tired carriage, and I thought at once of Dr. Post. He often comes about this time."

"I wish I had such ears," said Bertha.

"You can train your ears, and this is good practice."

"Oh, let me try it!" begged Carl. "I hear an auto down on Hubbard street! Now I'm going to guess. It must be Mr. Huntington's, because Mr. Barry never comes home at this hour."

"No!" "Wrong!" chuckled Norton and Bertha.

"Oh, it's that friend of the Shipmans'!" he went on, as the car drew near.

"No, it's—"

"Don't tell!" Carl put in. "Why, it is stopping here!" His eyes flew open.

"Uncle Stanley!" he shouted, jumping up and waving his arms.

"Who wants a ride?" called out the man in goggles.

"I!" "I!" "I!" was answered from the piazza, while Carl said, "We'll play that game again, or I'll play it by myself, till I can tell Uncle Stanley's auto when I hear it."—Youth's Companion.

"Comic Concert" Game.

Every one in the company chooses an imaginary musical instrument. One may be a violin, another a piano, a harp, and so on. The leader of the band also chooses one, say the flute. He begins to play this imaginary instrument, running his fingers up and down it and tooting away in representation of the real instrument. As soon as he begins the other players must follow suit; the piano player begins to strum an imaginary piano, the violin player to wield his bow, and so on—not only must the players imitate the actions, but also the sounds which proceed from the various instruments.

During the concert the leader will suddenly cease playing his flute and commence playing the violin, when the violin player must take up the leader's discarded flute playing. Presently the leader will change again. Any player who fails to take up the leader's instrument must take the leader's place and likewise pay a forfeit.

Literal Ted.

There is a little boy 5 years old who takes everything literally, and by so doing causes much amusement. Not long ago he heard his father say:

"Well, I am going to take the bull by the horns!" Whereupon Ted set up a wail:

"Oh! don't you do it, papa," he pleaded; "it is a terribly dangerous thing to do."

Another day he was given a glass of lemonade by a young lady. "Teddy's got the clam," she laughed, as a bit of ice slipped into the glass.

"Dear me!" frowned Teddy; "that is too bad; I never take clams in my lemonade!"

GETTING AT THE TROUBLE.

"All kickers into the pond," is one of the by-laws of a certain summer camp. The result is that there are no "kickers." Another preventive method of dealing with complaints is given in C. F. Carter's "When Railroads Were New."

Once, when there had been a very heavy rain, and the track was in such a condition that the train was to be delayed for hours, the passengers, following a custom that is still observed, heaped maledictions upon the management.

Some of the more spirited passengers drew up a set of resolutions denouncing the company for the high-handed invasion of their rights, as manifested in the delay, in scathing terms. The resolutions were passed along to be signed by all the passengers.

When they came to a minister, he said he would be happy to give his signature if the phraseology was changed slightly. Upon being requested to name the changes he wished, he wrote the following:

"Whereas, the recent rain has fallen at a time ill-suited to our pleasure and convenience and without consultation with us; and,

"Whereas, Jack Frost, who has been imprisoned in the ground some months, having become tired of his bondage, is trying to break loose; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we should be glad to have it otherwise."

When the good clergyman arose and in his best parliamentary voice read his proposed amendment, there was a hearty laugh, and nothing more was heard about censuring the management.

Money Saved Through Anty Drudge.

Mrs. Youngwife (at telephone)—"Hello Harry, you don't need to order those new tablecloths and napkins at Blashman's after all. Anty Drudge came in this morning and showed me how Fels-Naptha soap would take the stains out of the old ones. They're as clean and white as new now."

Anty Drudge—"You just keep on using Fels-Naptha, Deary, and it'll save you buying lots of things—everything you wash will wear so much longer. It'll save your health and beauty, too."

Stains are the great trial of a woman who does the family wash in the old way. Coffee stains, fruit stains, egg stains, occasionally blood stains, and many others which defy all ordinary soaps and hard rubbing as well. In despair, the housewife boils the clothes until their fibre is softened and weakened, but even then the shadows of the stains remain.

Such stains are easy for Fels-Naptha soap. They are but minute particles of colored matter clinging to threads of the cloth. The Fels-Naptha dissolves them into tiny atoms which can't cling to anything. A rinsing separates them from the clothes entirely. The stain is gone, leaving the clothes clean, white and pure. And mind you, all this is done in cold or lukewarm water, without boiling or hard rubbing. Fels-Naptha does not in the slightest degree harm the fibre of the cloth as boiling does. No other soap, no matter what it is called, will take out stains without boiling. Be sure to get the genuine Fels-Naptha. It comes in the red and green wrapper.

DEATH TO THE NIGHT RIDERS

This Is the Ultimatum of Kentucky's Governor.

TELLS THE FARMERS TO SHOOT

Accompanied by a Promise to Pardon Anyone Thus Solving the Night Rider Problem, Governor Willson Pleads With Farmers to Kill Anyone Who Attempts to Injure Their Property—Many Have Taken Advantage of This Offer and Are Converting Their Homes into Miniature Arsenals.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 15.—Governor Augustus E. Willson is determined to break up the night rider troubles in Kentucky, and to that end he has notified farmers to call on him for military aid until the farmers themselves can make preparations to resist the attack. In addition he has pleaded with the farmers to kill any person who attempts to injure their property, offering as a reward a pardon for the murder. The farmers who have so far refused to obey the command of the night riders and pool their tobacco, are taking advantage of the offer of the governor, and have made ample preparation to resist any attack. Soldiers guarding the home of Benjamin Longnecker in Mason county the past few days have returned to Lexington and report the Longnecker home a regular arsenal, with ten Jorgeson rifles and a half dozen Swiss repeating rifles and an equal number of shotguns and pistols and three men on guard day and night.

Similar precautions have been taken by others in various sections of the state. The Longnecker home was fired on a week or more ago and riddled with bullets.

I want you to give him my compliments and tell him that if anything like this corruption exists it must stop,' it is a lie. No proofs were ever submitted to me. Had there been proofs you may rest assured that action would have been taken. I have no recollection of any charges being made. I did not know Mr. Havemeyer and never saw him but once. Then he was pointed out to me."

COLLIDED AT SEA

Disaster in Rheo Straits Near Singapore Claims One Hundred Victims.

Singapore, Nov. 15.—The British steamer Onda has arrived here with her bows smashed, bringing sixty-one survivors from the Messageries Maritime mail steamer La Zeyne, with which the Onda was in collision in the Rheo straits. La Zeyne was so badly stove that she filled and sank in two minutes. One hundred of those on board of her were drowned, including seven European passengers, among whom were Baron and Baroness Benfey. The captain and five European officers of the steamer were also drowned. The survivors were picked up by boats from the Onda, but many of them were bitten by sharks before they could be hauled into the small boats.

A MYSTERY

How Did This Boy Come to Get Into the Chimney?

New York, Nov. 15.—The dead body of a five-year-old Italian boy who dropped out of sight about ten days ago was found in a five-foot chimney at 322 East Sixty-third street, Sunday. Nobody had more than a shrug by way of explanation as to how the five-year-old could get himself into the mouth of a chimney some two feet higher than he was. The police have sent men to find out if the boy got into the chimney all by himself. The life of the little boy was insured for $400, some one said.

Found Dead in a Boat.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 15.—The lifeless body of E. M. Sherrill, district agent of the Continental Casualty company, was found in a rowboat along the banks of the Illinois river, three miles north of here. He had left his hotel, stating that he intended to go fishing. He was a sufferer from heart trouble, and it is supposed that he suffered a stroke of apoplexy.

Deadly Toll of Gridiron.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Archer Christian of Richmond, Va., the half-back of the University of Virginia football team, who was injured in Saturday's game with Georgetown university, died at 3:40 o'clock Sunday morning in Georgetown university hospital from concussion of the brain.

IS THIS A THREAT?

Philadelphia Unionists Propose Nation-Wide Strike if Gompers Goes to Jail.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—By resolution of the Central Labor Union unanimously adopted Sunday, every union wage worker in Philadelphia will go out on a two weeks' strike if Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, officers of the American Federation of Labor, are put in jail for contempt of court in posting a stove company as "unfair." By Tuesday the federation, now in session in Toronto, will have been asked to extend the local movement into a nationwide strike if the three officers go to prison and every union in the country through its headquarters will be asked to join.

On the Eve of a Smashup.

FRANCE APPLAUDS STEINHEIL VERDICT

Streets of Paris Resounded With Rejoicing.

Paris, Nov. 15.—At an early hour Sunday morning Mme. Marguerite Steinheil was acquitted by a jury of the murder of her husband, Adolph Steinheil, a noted painter, and her step-mother, Mme. Japy.

The verdict was rendered after two and a half hours' deliberation, during which the jury thrice summoned the president of the court for explanations, thus proving that the original majority was for conviction.

Upon the announcement of the verdict the crowds surged forward in a solid wall, making the rafters ring with cheers. Outside the gloomy court the first of thousands who had been waiting for hours took up the cry.

Special editions of the papers spread the news like wildfire through the boulevards, where thousands more were waiting in front of the cafes, and the same scenes of rejoicing were witnessed there.

THREE MEN CREMATED

Boarding House Fire at Pittsburg Claimed Heavy Toll of Life.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Three dead and a score injured, seven of them perhaps fatally, was the result of a fire at 425 Water street early Sunday. The three-story restaurant and boarding house of Frank Miller was burned to the ground and from the ruins there were brought three charred corpses, the identity of which is not known. The trio came to Miller's place late Saturday night and went to bed in one room where they were cremated.

Plea for Divorce Reveals Strange Secret.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Dr. Alice Bush of Oakland, well-known physician, and daughter of Tax Collector Bush of San Francisco, has just been granted a divorce on the unusual plea of fraud in marriage contract. In plain words, Dr. Bush found that she had married a woman, and she prayed to be legally freed by applying for annulment of the marriage contract. Her husband was R. K. Morgan, a fine-looking young medical student twenty-three years old, who came here from New York. "He" was not over half Dr. Bush's age, but they were constantly together. They were married in 1905, but the complaint does not state when the wife discovered her husband's secret. Dr. Bush never changed her name, and most of her friends were unaware of the marriage.

"Mother Church" May Excommunicate Leader of New York Circle.

New York, Nov. 15.—That Augusta E. Stetson of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in this city, is to be put on her trial by the directors of the mother church in Boston, is a report that has added to the stir in Christian Science circles here.

According to the best information obtainable, Mrs. Stetson, with a small party of supporters, left here for Boston on the 5 o'clock train. Edward

MRS. AUGUSTA E. STETSON.

Barlow, chairman of the Christian Science publications, said he was unaware of her departure and he knew nothing of her errand. An adverse verdict at the trial, if there is to be one, could mean, it is said, only one thing—Mrs. Stetson's excommunication. Ever since the second admonitory notice sent to Mrs. Stetson by the Boston authorities it has been a subject of conjecture here how long it would be before the third step, excommunication, would follow.

time or else go out of her mind. So she took a good rest in order that she might be in trim for the seance which she gives tonight. She will do her work tonight to as hardened a lot of skeptics as she will have to face during her visit in America. Dr. Saram Ellison, who is the representative here of Harry Keller, the magician, and another physician, whose name is withheld, will watch the actions of Paladino in order to find out if it is worth while for Keller to come east from Los Angeles to look her over for himself. Ever since Keller has been doing sleight of hand feats he has held out a standing offer of $1,000 for any piece of necromancy which can't be explained on purely physical grounds. If Dr. Ellison and the other physician decide that Eusapia's work is beyond their powers of explanation they will wire Keller to come east and be present at some of the seances. Another man who will be at the seance who is capable of picking flaws is David P. Abbott of Omaha, who wrote a book exposing tricky clairvoyants. None of the psychologists such as Prof. Muensterberg and Prof. Stanley Hall will be present.

DANGEROUS POSITION

Zelaya's Forces Now Between the Rebels and the Deep Sea.

Bluefields (wireless to Colon), Nov. 16.—General Chamorro, commanding the rebel forces, after destroying a number of river boats and harbor tugs, has evacuated Greytown, which is now occupied by General Toledo with 2,000 government troops. Chamorro, however, with the gunboat Ometepe and several converted war vessels, is maintaining an effective blockade of the port. The loyal forces are in a dangerous position, as the only exit from Greytown now is by sea. It would look as if Zelaya's forces were bottled up. Chamorro is expected to lay siege to Greytown, and in that event General Toledo will probably have to capitulate. Provisions in the town are scarce and none are allowed to enter by the rebel forces.

THE SECOND TIME IN COURT'S HISTORY

High Tribunal Passes Sentence
In Contempt Case.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Ninety days' imprisonment was imposed on former Sheriff Joseph F. Shipp of Chattanooga, Tenn., by the supreme court of the United States for contempt of court in failing to prevent the lynching of a negro, Ed Johnson, convicted of assault, but whose execution had been stayed by the court.

Luther Williams and Nick Nolan were sentenced to imprisonment for ninety days for connection with the lynching, and Jeremiah Gibson, jailer, Henry Padgett and William Mayso, all of Chattanooga, for sixty days. Chief Justice Fuller, who pronounced the sentence, designated the United States jail in the District of Columbia as the place of imprisonment.

No case in American jurisprudence has created more interest among lawyers than this. In the south public opinion has been strongly on the side of the accused men. Only once before in the history of the nation's highest court has sentence been passed in the courtroom on parties adjudged guilty of contempt. That was in 1869, when John Chiles of Texas was fined $250 for disobeying an order of the court by directing the holders in England of certain bonds issued by the state of Texas in aid of the Confederate cause, not to deliver them up to the state authorities for cancellation as the decision prescribed.

LET US GIVE THANKS

Day Has Been Appointed by President
For Appropriate Services.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Following is President Taft's annual Thanksgiving proclamation:

"The season of the year has returned when, in accordance with the reverent custom established by our forefathers, the people of the United States are wont to meet in their usual places of worship on a day of thanksgiving appointed by the civil magistrate to return thanks to God for the great mercies and benefits they have enjoyed.

"During this past year we have been highly blessed. No great calamities of flood or tempest or epidemic sickness have befallen us. We have lived in quietness, undisturbed by wars or rumors of wars. Peace and the plenty of bounteous crops and of great industrial production animate a cheerful and resolute people to all the renewed energies of beneficent industry and material and moral progress.

"It is altogether fitting that we should humbly and gratefully acknowledge the divine source of these blessings.

"Therefore, I hereby appoint Thursday, the twenty-fifth day of November, as a day of general thanksgiving, and I call upon the people on that day to lay aside their usual vocations, to repair to their churches and unite in appropriate services of praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God."

BOTH EMBEZZLEMENT AND GRAND LARCENY

Charged In Indictments Against
Charles L. Warriner.

Cincinnati, Nov. 16.—On charges of embezzlement and grand larceny, Charles L. Warriner, former treasurer of the Big Four railroad in Cincinnati, has been indicted by the Hamilton county grand jury. The indictment includes two counts—one charging embezzlement of $5,000 on Oct. 1, and the other charging grand larceny of the same amount on the same date. Warriner, it is alleged, stole in all $643,000.

Explaining the small amount named in the indictment, Prosecutor Hunt said: "The indictment charges only the specific theft of $5,000, so that if Warriner is not convicted or if convicted, and the verdict is reversed, he can at once be indicted again on any of the numerous counts involved in the theft of $643,000."

James E. Robinson of Warriner's counsel said that although "a reasonable time" was allowed by law for the accused in an indictment to enter his plea in court, Warriner will promptly plead to the indictment. Mr. Robinson said he was not prepared to make public what this plea would be, notwithstanding the fact that his client had been announced as making a confession.

They Have Had Enough.

IT'S GLOOMY FOR LABOR LEADERS

Only One More Step to the Gates of Jail.

THEIR PLEA FOR A STAY DENIED

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia Acts Adversely to the Application of Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison For a Stay of Execution—Unless the Supreme Court Steps in Within the Next Two Weeks the Men Will Have to Go to Jail For Violating an Injunction of the Court in Boycott Case.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The application of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, whose jail sentences were recently upheld by the court, to stay the mandate of the court being sent down to the court below for execution of the sentence, has been denied by the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

The court did take under advisement, however, a request for two weeks' delay and will make known its decision before Friday next, when under the rules of the court the mandate will go down unless the supreme court of the United States intervenes. Attorney Ralston, representing the labor men, requested a stay until Jan. 2 next. Attorney Darlington, representing the company which brought the suit to restrain the labor organizations from prosecuting a boycott against it and out of which grew the jail sentences, opposed the length of the stay asked and declared the request was an extraordinary one. Mr. Darlington said that the counsel on the other side had more than seven months during which the case was under consideration by the court to determine on their action, in the event of an adverse decision. Mr. Darlington also informed the court that the advice which reach him show the labor people have made no attempt to obey the injunction and are still violating it. Unless the United States supreme court steps in before Friday, or two weeks following Friday if the extra stay asked for is granted, the three men will have to go to jail. Members of the bar say that there are only two modes of procedure to get the cases before the supreme court of the United States, the writ of certiorari and habeas corpus proceedings.

SONGS THAT REMAIN.

Not jeweled words in golden phrase,
Not fancies fine in airy rhyme,
Sung in a poet's idle days
Make verses that outlast his time—

'Tis when he feels within his heart
The swell of passions, sob of pain,
And all life's little things depart
The poet writes songs that remain.

He weaves them not in words that speak

Heroic measures, tragic lines,
But in such accents low and meek
As sympathy alone divines.

Unfettered by eccentric rhyme,
He sings of man's eternal quest
In language simple yet sublime,
By truth and love and joy impressed;

And lo, his liquid measures sweet
To tell the heart's high hope and trust,
And laughing children long repeat
His lines, when he is in the dust!
—Charles W. Stevenson.

The Bluebells

William Curtis felt that there were all the elements of a quarrel in the situation, and although naturally headstrong he was determined not to precipitate matters. He spoke slowly and quietly, and his manner was that of the perfect wooer.

"Mary, dear, do you really want those bluebells?"

The girl in the boat with him knew that as she lay back in the pillows she was a delightful picture. She knew it by reason of the man's face, for his blue eyes displayed hunger and his mouth was expressive of a desire to please her.

She was right. She looked very handsome as she idly watched the fleecy clouds floating by in the azure above her. Her throat was warm and delicately shaped, her skin was perfect in curve and color, her hair lazily moved to and fro in the summer breeze, the soft, cooling breeze which caused the clouds to flutter overhead and their reflections to glide amid the scintillating ripples of the river.

Surely no quarrel could generate amid such surroundings. Nature shone at her fairest, in sky, in water, in verdure, but there was the suggestion of something untoward as Mary Lillington raised herself with a gesture of boredom and said in a sweet tone which carried also a suggestion of imperiousness:

"I do want them; certainly I do!"

William Curtis was roused; he could see that by picking the particular flowers, which grew some distance up the bank, he would probably get his clothes torn and dirty, and there was a great risk of falling into the water. He mentally put the girl's wishes down to some erratic caprice, which was calculated to excite her vanity by showing her power over him.

In her mind Mary was asking herself of what use was a lover if he would not obey her every behest; the foolishness of her request was nothing to her, it was the withholding of anything by her lover which rankled.

"Will you not get them, Will? I—"

William Curtis heard the half-appeal, half-command, and felt a surge of anger pass over him. But he was perfectly self-controlled and replied:

"My dear little girl, you—"

"I am not your dear little girl if you will not do as I wish."

The words were hasty, and even as they escaped her Mary felt that it would have been better not to have uttered them.

"Mary, Mary, what is it you are saying? Surely, my little girl does not require me to—"

"Merely to sacrifice yourself? Yes, that is all," was her continuation.

"Sacrifice myself? Of course I will when there is something to sacrifice myself for."

Mary misunderstood him. What, not sacrifice himself for her, not give up anything that he might please her! Strange kind of lover this; not like those ancient knights who went through fire and water for their ladies. Her answer was snapped out, and her face was red with anger.

"I want them!"

"Then, Mary," was the firm reply, "I shall not humor you. You do not need them, and I can get others far better."

He knew he was right and felt that he should not show any weakness, seeing he was convinced that the request was an unreasonable one.

But he was not prepared for the immediate result of his attempt to discipline her.

"Mr. Curtis—the tone was cold and formal—"will you kindly row me to the boathouse, please?"

"Mary—"

She held up her hand in the imperious manner which he had often admired, but which now, stripped of its romance, was cruel, and said:

"Mr. Curtis, will you please row me to the boathouse?"

The man was angry but proud. He was ready for an outburst of her selfishness and unreasonableness, but he said nothing; he rowed away from the hateful bank and plunged his oars into the stream with a vim and a celerity which astonished the girl. Again she misunderstood him; she imagined that he was rowing fast to get rid of her quickly, but he was not. It was his method of working off his temper, for striking viciously at the water was better, he argued, than showing his feelings by speech. Besides, he thought she would relent.

The banks of the river sped by them; they passed the streamlet which led to the weir with its roaring and its foaming, for the current of the river ran strongly; the trees skimmed past them, and soon they reached the boathouse. With the utmost politeness he handed her out of the boat.

"Is it worth while quarreling—"

He stopped, his speech frozen on his lips by her features, cold and unresponsive. She went away, and he, returning to the boat, re-embarked, and for an hour sculled in silence. Then he murmured:

"Strange cattle, women. When you think you've got them, you haven't!"

With this prosaic and not over-cultured expression ringing in the chambers of his mind, he went to his house, and by the last post he received his ring and one or two other presents which he had made her. Then darkness descended; he had lost her, and he cursed all bluebells which grew on the banks of the river.

The weeks which followed were devastating to William Curtis. He had loved, he still loved Mary Lillington with a great love, and he wondered why a moment's caprice should wreck his happiness. Why had she demanded so ridiculous a thing? Why had he not yielded? His judgment had led him astray; that at least was how he viewed the matter now. Yet he was conscious that he had acted rightly; to have given away might have been the way of outward peace, but he knew he would have despised himself had he acted otherwise than as he did.

Mary herself gave no apparent sign that the break had affected her seriously. She wondered that he had not returned her presents and that he had never acknowledged the ring. She resolved that he should not think she cared, and although they met frequently they ignored each other. Mary, however, was suffering; she was still

"I DID MISS YOU."

In love with him, and would have been glad of an opportunity to show it. Alas, that awful pride, the undoing of many.

William Curtis kept his grief to himself. Mary tried to make him jealous; as often as she could she showed herself in the companionship of a man whom she knew Curtis despised and detested. This served a two-fold object; it diverted her, caused her to forget in the excitement of the new companionship the void in her heart, and also, she hoped (Mary was not very original) it would raise the jealousy of her late lover.

But Curtis was not touched any way—outwardly. Yet in his heart there raged the discontent and horror of jealousy, that she should have thought fit to seek distraction and pleasure with Manners, cringing, miserable and self-opinionated Manners—why, it filled him with disgust! Surely she could not think seriously of mating herself with such a man.

And if William Curtis had only known, Mary compared every action, every word of Manners with what Curtis himself would have done in the same circumstances, and the comparisons were to the benefit, the great benefit, of her late fiancé.

One day Curtis was walking by the side of the river; the towing path was almost deserted, the sun was shining, and the country looked splendid. However, the river was not so nice in appearance; there had been heavy rains during the last few days, the lands adjacent to the river had been flooded, and the stream was dirty and ran swiftly.

He was still in the mood of despair, still looking back on the times he had spent so pleasantly in these very parts. It accentuated his desolate feeling as he noticed this place and that aspect which she had laughingly commented upon in those happy days which now seemed so far away and which did not seem likely to be renewed. He loved all these objects for her sake; why, the very sun, now sinking below the western horizon in an effulgence of pink and mauve and crimson loveliness, was dear to him; had she not enjoyed a similar sunset in the days gone by?

And he was to find out that she was enjoying this one also, for looking up he saw her blossom form in a punt and the odious Manners lazily punting.

The river was running quickly, the weir was a little to the left, and notice boards warned the boaters away from the particular tributary which led to it.

Manners punted on; he cared little for weirs. Mary never felt so mischievous as at that moment spying Curtis she said something which caused the punter to laugh boisterously, with the result that he lost his grip of the pole and was thrown into the water, where he floundered bewildered.

The punt was now left to the current; gradually the craft was driven to the stream of the weir. Mary laughed a little at the wet and bedraggled Manners, who struggled to the opposite bank, but she soon became alarmed, for the boat acquired a rapid momentum. She must do something; she rose unsteadily, and the craft swung, nearly upsetting. Curtis, who had seen everything, forgot the past—remembered only that the girl he loved was in danger. It was a situation which demanded dealing with at once if the punt and its occupant were not to be hurled over the weir.

"Try to guide it to the bank," he shouted, meaning the girl to use the other punt pole.

But Mary was now too frightened to hear, much less to do anything. The weir hissed and foamed, and the noise struck terror to her; she shut her eyes and waited for the end.

The roar of the water came nearer and nearer, the splashing fell all around her, and just when she was giving herself up and wondering whether her body would be much mutilated in the awful leap, the punt's course was suddenly arrested and a jarring noise fell on her hearing. She furtively opened her eyes and saw a head wet and unkempt, bobbing in front of the punt, and she felt that slowly, almost indistinguishably, she was being drawn to the bank. She had not heard Curtis jump into the river—she had only the rush of the water in her ears. After a struggle the craft was dragged to the bank and there made fast.

A white and frightened Mary stepped ashore. She held out her hand to the dripping figure and her eyes welled, her lips shook and her voice was full of emotion.

"Thank you! Thank you!" and Curtis wondered at the beauty of her voice.

That evening with the moon shining on the ripples of the swollen river, Curtis restored the ring to its owner, and as he did so he took his toll in one long, sweet kiss; and at Mary's breast was a bunch of bluebells, his present.

"I did miss you, Will," was all the girl said of their estrangement.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

COREY'S NEW CHATEAU.

Romantic History of the Old Bonaparte Estate of Villégens.

Mr. Corey, a steel trust magnate and his wife, have hired the former country house of the late emperor's uncle, Jerome, who fifty years ago was known in Paris as the ex-king of Westphalia, the Frankfurt English Mail says. He himself took the title so seriously as to refuse precedence to Queen Victoria's husband. In consequence his imperial nephew did not invite him to the fête given in compliment to her late Britannic majesty when she visited Paris during its first universal exhibition.

Lord Byron's old flame, the countess of Guiccioli, whom Paris knew as the Marquise de Boissy, used to direct for some years his little court when he was en villégature there. She had still pretensions to beauty, and thought she owed to Mrs. Grundy the duty of taking with her the extremely lively marquise, her husband. It pleased him to be the merry-andrew of the chateau, as he was of the senate, and he had no objection to King Jerome, after an interval of nearly thirty years and many adventures on the lady's side, taking the place that Byron had filled. His former majesty remained what he had been at Cassel—gracious, polite to the ladies, and apt to lose his heart in a flirtation with no matter whom.

He had at Villégens his marshal's salary of 30,000 francs a year, his senator's salary, and his dotation as imperial prince and last surviving brother of Napoleon. It brought him 2,000,000 francs annually, and he had free of all rent and taxes the royal chateau and home park of Meudon and the residential part of the Palais Royal, both sumptuously furnished. That marshal's baton gave him a right to two saddle horses for himself, four for his equerry and aid, and to two carriages and the horses they required. The only legal Prince Napoleon, who had also rooms at the Palais Royal, received a dotation of 500,000 francs, but bullied the ex-king into giving him 200,000 francs in addition. A Marchese Bartholone had, as a wife in the eyes of the church and the Italian law then existing, lazily ruled Jerome before the De Boissys came in and ousted her. They had been helped in their wicked intrigue against her by the Princess Mathilde and Prince Napoleon for reasons it would now take too long to explain. The other sons were Patterson Bonaparte, father of Lawyer Bonaparte, of Baltimore; Count Camara Camarata, and the most able man of the Bonapartist side, Billaud, who, to the great grief and loss of the emperor, died about a year after Jerome.

A Pleased Audience.

"What makes you spend so much money on that lawsuit?"

"It's a matter of taste. Some people like to attend lectures. I prefer to pay more and hear a lawyer discourse on affairs in which I am personally interested."—Washington Star.

Sounds Appetizing.

"I wonder if moths have any preference as to textile fabrics?"

"I should think cheesecloth would make tasty eating," responded the other.—Kansas City Journal.

NO MONEY FOR STREET BEGGARS

How Charity Often Forces Unfortunates into Ranks of Panhandlers.

"Money should never be given to street beggars," says Theodore Walters in "Six Weeks in Beggardom," in Everybody's Magazine. "It is impossible for the average person to discriminate offhand between the genuinely needy and the professional panhandler. There are many overkind people who prefer to give to all rather than that one go hungry, and if there were no depots of immediate relief, this might prove a good rule. But in the existing conditions the possible consequences are too fraught with danger to the genuinely unfortunate for the practice to be continued by any right-thinking persons."

"The danger of giving the unfortunate money offhand is that you may force him into the ranks of professional beggars. However honest he may be in first intention, unless he have a definite goal before his eyes—and men who are down and out seldom have such—he will more than likely return to the same free fountain at which he so easily quenched his initial thirst."

There are many cases to prove this. I know of one man who until a year or two ago owned a profitable little fruit shop in a side street far downtown. One night, having locked up the shop and being ready to start home, he found himself by accident without money to pay his carfare. He stopped a man on the street and asked him for 5 cents. He got it so easily that he determined next day to tell the story often and get many nickels. He did so and the practice became so remunerative that despite his wife's pleadings and protests he sold the little shop and became a regular beggar.

Never do panhandlers make the mistake of appealing to the reason—the motions of the crowd only are attacked! there is always a complete human story in the pose. What, for instance, could be more compelling of sympathy than the spectacle of the bent old gray-head patiently and despairingly, as it seemed, grinding a wheezy old organ which he had tied into a broken-down baby carriage? The suggestiveness of that perambulator, coupled with the walls of that organ, more forlorn than mortal child ever uttered, was worth dollars a day to the old fellow. It was art—reprehensible art, of course, but art nevertheless. And the artist grew rich, for when investigated by the police he was found to be the owner of many houses in Hoboken.

Again, could there be anything more likely to excite compassion than the crust-throwing trick? It was invented by a German beggar named Lang, whose French disciple, Lemaire, practiced it subsequently. I have seen a crust-thrower operating in 6th avenue. It was before the time of this investigation. He was a semi-well-dressed man who walked swiftly down through the crowds of shoppers. Suddenly he uttered a hoarse cry and darted out into the roadway, where, pouncing upon a crust of bread, which he had thrown there previously, he began gnawing it ravenously. He did not wait for sympathy. He walked rapidly away, but a number of women who saw the act ran after him and crowded one another for the privilege of giving him money.

TUTORS AS PALS OF STUDENTS.

Direct Contact a Marked Feature of Oxford University Education.

Another important person to the student at Oxford is the tutor, W. W. Boyd says in a London letter to the St. Louis Times. The teaching function is performed by two classes of people; by the professors and readers, who teach in the name and with the authority of the whole university, and by the tutors and lecturers, who are appointed and paid by the colleges

RASH ALL OVER BODY.

Awful, Crusted, Weeping Eczema on Little Sufferer—A Score of Treatments Prove Dismal Failures—Cure Achieved by Cuticura.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. In about two months he was entirely well. George L. Lambert, 139 West Centre St., Mahanoy City, Pa., Sept. 26 and Nov. 4, 1907."

Clerk's Queer Blunder.

In a recent hearing before a committee of the London county council one of the participants quoted Shakespeare against his opponent, who, he said, "roared as gently as a suckling dove." The clerk of the committee, who may have prided himself on his knowledge of natural history, entered the remark on the minutes in this fashion: "Mr. Balfour Brown remarked that his learned friend had roared as gently as a suckling pig."

Knew of One.

"Suggestion? H'mph! Did you ever hear of a real cure effected by 'suggestion'?"

"I personally know of one. I once suggested to a young fellow that if he didn't want to have a big dog chasing him off the premises he'd better quit coming to my house, and it cured him of the habit."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. SAM'L LEE, 3523 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided. Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for which distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

Dark Philosophy.

The old-time dandy is often a keen philosopher and an excellent judge of human nature.

One of these typical old "aunties" was sitting in a California street car when a southern woman boarded it. In this land of the "progressive colored person," the old negro looked like a letter from home to the southern woman, who immediately opened conversation.

The car stopped to take on a flashily-dressed blonde who ostentatiously seated herself between the southern woman and the negro (the seats in the car being the long side seats), then noticing her proximity to the negro, just as ostentatiously removed herself to the seat across the car. The old dandy looked at the southern woman with a sly twinkle in her eye.

"Honey," she said softly, "if any of her family had ever owned anything like me, she's jess as leave set in my lap."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Complaint has been made to the Ipswich (England) guardians that inmates of the workhouse infirmary were washed as early as 3 o'clock in the morning and a member protested against it, especially in the cases of the older folk. The reply was made that it would be impossible to begin later unless more nurses were employed.

Russia's copper production is increasing, amounting to 10,306, 14,554 and 16,591 tons in 1906, 1907 and 1908, respectively. Deposits of copper in the Caucasus present vast opportunities, and enormous beds of coprolites exist in Central Russia and in the Dnieper basin, the quantity in the latter alone being estimated as high as 27,000,000 tons, says a consular report.

The Germans are developing their high school at Kiao-Chau, China, with their usual thoroughness. Its scope is even larger than the proposed Hong-Kong university. Except a grant of $10,000 from the Chinese government, the whole cost is paid by the German government. German text-books and other works are translated into Chinese in a department of the school, says the London Times.

Clothing, particularly new clothing, is a powerful mental and moral tonic, according to a medical specialist quoted in the Outfitter of London. The specialist says that shabby or ill-fitting clothes are a source of constant worry, which tends to take the keener edge off the wits of the average man. "The mere fact of being smartly dressed," adds the doctor, "is a strong mental stimulant, and the man who is shabby, and knows it, is often less capable than his well-dressed mental inferior."

A new "cod bank" has been discovered in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, off the west coast of Newfoundland, by the Canadian government survey ship Ellnor. The new bank is said to be situated about twenty-five miles northwest from Port Riche (the northwest point of Ingonnigach bay), and is reported to be about twenty-eight miles long and ten to twelve miles wide. The least depth of water over the bank is said to be about eighteen fathoms. Cod are reported to be in abundance.

The municipality of Paris has made an attempt to grapple with the problem of traffic congestion. Owing to the difficulty of crossing the roads, due to the constant stream of motors, underground passages for pedestrians are to be built at various points beneath the Champs Elysees. If the Champs Elysees tunnels prove a success, others will be built in the center of Paris, and foot passengers will in future cross not over streets, but under them. The scheme of inclined planes, for perambulators, has been abandoned on the ground of cost, and only staircases will be provided.

It has been stated that the Vatican had been approached with the view of selecting a patron saint for aviators, and that it had been suggested that Elijah would be an appropriate person. The originator, remarks the London Globe, of the story seems to have not taken into account that Elijah was an Old Testament character, and as such would be ineligible. No doubt, going to heaven in a chariot of fire would have made Elijah an appropriate patron. A Paris contemporary suggests that St. Columbe should be chosen. Her name alone has much to recommend her. She suffered martyrdom under Marcus Aurelius.

Captain Von Ermmerik of the royal Dutch mail packet Van Spilbergen recently made a clever capture after a murderous assault on a wealthy saloon passenger while bound for Sydney from Batavia. After the alarm had been given he had a full crew of Malays lined up on deck and as he passed along the ranks he placed his hand on the bare breast of each man to feel the action of his heart. The blood coursed normally through the veins of all but one, and his heart was throbbing violently. The captain arrested him on suspicion. Another man's hands were abnormally cold, but this fact was not considered sufficiently strong to justify arrest. However, the first man subsequently confessed to the crime and indicated the seaman with the cold hands as his accomplice.

Revised Upward.

One evening at family prayers the head of the house read that chapter which concludes with, "And the wife see that she reverence her husband." After the exercises had closed and the children had gone to bed, the New York Evening Post says, he quoted it, looking meaningfully at his wife.

"Let us see what the Revised Version says on that subject," said she. "I will follow the new teaching, if you please."

The Revised Version was produced, and her chagrin may be imagined as the head impressively read, "And let the wife see that she fear her husband."

HELPLESS WITH RHEUMATISM.

The Experience of Many Who Do Not Know the Kidneys Are Weak.

Jacob C. Bahr, 18 Broadway, Lebanon, Ohio, says: "For three months I was helpless in bed with muscular rheumatism and had to be fed. My feet swelled, my legs were rigid, black spots flitted before my eyes and I was sore all over. Doctors didn't help me and I couldn't raise hand or foot. To please my wife I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and in two weeks I was improving. Then by leaps and bounds I got better until well and back at work. After such mortal agony this seemed wonderful."

Love.

It is hard to preserve equanimity and greatness on that debatable ground between love and esteem. There is nothing so stable and unfloating as love. "Mix half pint of good whiskey; two ounces of glycerine; half ounce of Concentrated pine compound. Shake the bottle well each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful four times a day." This prescription is said to work wonders.

The Concentrated pine is a special pine product and comes only in half ounce bottles, each enclosed in an airtight case, but be sure it is labeled "Concentrated" in order to get the genuine article.

Kept His Word.

He was a little man, but he had a loud voice and evidently wanted everyone to know what he said. He and a companion—who, he it said to his credit, seemed ashamed of the company he was in—stood in the hotel rotunda. The little fellow was talking about Ireland, and he said many hard things concerning the country and the people.

A great big man stood by listening to the little fellow's vapors. He merely smiled, until the little fellow said in a very loud tone:

"Show me an Irishman and I'll show you a coward."

Then the big fellow slipped up and, touching the little fellow on the shoulder, said in a heavy bass voice:

"What's that you said?"

"I said, show me an Irishman and I'll show you a coward," said the little fellow, whose knees were shaking under him.

"Well, I'm an Irishman," said the big man.

"You are an Irishman? Well," and a smile of joy flitted over the little fellow's countenance as he saw a hole through which he could crawl, "I'm a coward." And he set off at a run.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Coffee Usually Means Sickness, but Postum Always Means Health.

Those who have never tried the experiment of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum in its place and in this way regaining health and happiness can learn much from the experience of others who have made the trial.

One who knows says: "I drank coffee for breakfast every morning until I had terrible attacks of indigestion producing days of discomfort and nights of sleeplessness. I tried to give up the use of coffee entirely, but found it hard to go from hot coffee to a glass of water. Then I tried Postum."

"It was good and the effect was so pleasant that I soon learned to love it and have used it for several years. I improved immediately after I left off coffee and took on Postum and am now entirely cured of my indigestion and other troubles all of which were due to coffee. I am now well and contented and all because I changed from coffee to Postum."

"Postum is much easier to make right every time than coffee, for it is so even and always reliable. We never use coffee now in our family. We use Postum and are always well."

"There's a reason" and it is proved by trial.

Jump Fever.

In a party of locomotive engineers who were talking about old time fellow craftsmen reference was made to one old timer who had come to his death through "jump fever." "What's 'jump fever'?" inquired an outsider who was interested in the conversation. "Jump fever," explained an engineer, "is a sort of hallucination that affects some engineers and leads them to leap from the cab to escape a supposed impending collision. It's mostly freight engineers that are affected. On long runs out west a freight engineer may be thirty-six hours at the throttle without much chance for rest owing to mishaps. He gets sleepy and dozes in the cab. All of a sudden he wakes up, but his faculties are scattered, and what with lightness of the head and the motion of the cab he gets an idea that a collision is about to happen. In a semiconscious state he dives out of his window, and the chances are he's a goner when he lands. The engineer we referred to had done the trick twice, but he was killed the third time out on the Santa Fe Road."—Philadelphia Record.

Her Excuse.

"Bertha, my dear, I have been looking over your writing exercises. Your orthography is atrocious. You don't seem to know how to spell even the simplest words."

"Spelling, papa, is purely arbitrary. Words were made before the alphabet was."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take.

Most of the things man wants here below are those he realizes it will be almost impossible for him to get.

Some people would drown with a life preserver at hand. They are the kind that suffer from Rheumatism and Neuralgia when they can get Hamlin's Wizard Oil, the best of all pain remedies.

When you see a woman wearing a clinging gown it's a sign she thinks she has a good figure.

PERRY DAVIS' PAINKILLER has no substitute. No other remedy is so effective for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Stiffness, Neuralgia or cold of any sort. Put up in 25c. 50c. and 100c. bottles.

There is a terrible lot of time wasted in arguing.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

MINERS LEFT TO THEIR FATE

It Became Necessary to Seal Cherry Mine.

FLAMES BROKE FORTH AFRESH

Rescue Parties Had Thrice Penetrated to the Bottom of the Shaft in Quest of Bodies of the Three Hundred or More Entombed Miners. When Their Humane Work Was Checked by Fierce Flames Which Necessitated the Second Sealing of the Ill-Fated Mine—It Will Be Days Before Work Can Be Resumed.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 16.—Fire engines and fire-fighting apparatus were rushed here from LaSalle on a special train last evening when fire broke out afresh in the St. Paul mine. The main shaft was sealed again in the hope of smothering the flames sufficiently to permit of fighting the fire when the special engines arrived.

The fire broke out with great intensity after the workers and inspectors had thrice descended into the shaft to the bottom. On the first two trips no sign of fire was detected near the shaft, and there was little smoke. Then the fans were started in the hope of clearing the galleries that search for the three hundred or more bodies of the miners entombed Saturday afternoon might go on. Suddenly the flames were rekindled, flames pouring out of the stables where the fire started. Inspector James Taylor and R. Y. Williams were being lowered into the shaft when they discovered the flames about 100 feet from the bottom and toward the exit shaft. They signalled for an ascent and ordered the fire department at work. The water power was insufficient and within a sort time the shaft was sending forth volumes of smoke and the heat became excessive.

All hope of further exploration in the mine was abandoned and experts say it will be several days before any further effort to reach the entombed miners can be made.

Shortly after the mine was re-sealed the officials announced that carbonic acid gas and steam will be forced through pipes to the bottom of the mine. President McDonald of the United Mine Workers said if this was done every man in the mine would be dead within a few minutes.

HE BLAMED THE BOOZE

Child's Assailant Pleads Extenuation of His Horrid Crime.

Washington, Ind., Nov. 16.—John Eagle, aged 25, was arraigned before Judge Houghton in the Daviess circuit court on the charge of assaulting the daughter of Councilman A. C. Wise on Oct. 24. He entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

Eagle met the Wise girl, who is twelve years old, in a lonely woods, where she was looking for walnuts with three companions of her age. Eagle enticed her to a thicket away from the other children and there attacked her. He escaped and was traced to Knox county, west of Vincennes, where he was captured three days later and brought to the jail here. Afterward Eagle confessed to the crime, giving in detail his actions on that day. He laid the blame for the act to having drunk almost a quart of whisky the forenoon of the day he committed the crime.

FOUL PLAY ALLEGED

Family of Illinois Merchant Insist He Was Murdered and Robbed.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 16.—The police are investigating the tragic death of C. A. McMahon, aged thirty, a merchant of Westfield, Ill., whose body was found along the Vandalla railroad tracks in West Terre Haute. While wounds on the body indicate McMahon was killed when he fell from a moving train, a brother of the dead man insists that McMahon was murdered and robbed of his personal belongings.

Accused by Daughter.

Petersburg, Ind., Nov. 16.—Henry Leighty, a farmer living three miles east of here, was arrested on a grand jury indictment charged with a crime against his twenty-three-year old daughter. Leighty denies the charge and will plead not guilty. In default of bond he was remanded to jail.

Many Teachers Will Gather.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 16.—The third annual session of the Southwestern Teachers' association in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, will be held here on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 26 and 27. Last year the attendance was more than 1,000 teachers and this year it is expected to reach 1,500.

Treasurer's Wife Wants Divorce.

Danville, Ind., Nov. 16.—Suit for absolute divorce, maintenance and alimony in the sum of $20,000 has been filed in the Hendricks circuit court by Emma Hadley against Oscar Hadley, state treasurer. Cruel and inhuman treatment is the cause alleged for bringing the action.

Good Cough Medicine for Children and Grown Folks, Too.

"We could hardly do without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Mrs. Flora Despain, of Boyd, Ky. "I have found it to be so good for the croup and have used it for years. I can heartily recommend it for coughs, colds and croup in children and old folks, too." The above shows the explicit confidence that many mothers place in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a confidence based on many year's experience in the use of it. No one need hesitate to use this remedy for it contains no chloroform, opium or other narcotics and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

HE TOOK OFFENSE

Memphis Negro Wouldn't Stand to Be Preceded by White Men.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 15.—Because they boarded a streetcar on one of the downtown streets in front of W. C. Smith, a negro, Ed Cardwell and Ed Koentz, young white men, were shot and instantly killed late Sunday night in an isolated section in the outskirts of the city. According to the conductor of the car, Cardwell and Koentz remained on the back platform while the negro took a seat in the car. Without warning the negro arose, flashed a pistol and began firing. Koentz fell off the car dead at the first shot and Cardwell received two bullets, dying instantly. The negro surrendered an hour later.

Croup Cured and a Child's Life Saved.

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to that of the thousands who have been benefitted by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My child, Andrew, when only three years old, was taken with a severe attack of croup, and thanks to the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy his life was saved and today he is a robust and healthy boy," says Mrs. A. Coy, Jr., of San Antonio, Texas. This remedy has been in use for many years. Thousands of mothers keep it at hand and it has never been known to fail. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

BLACKMAILER AT WORK

Wells County Farmer Received a Threatening Letter.

Bluffton, Ind., Nov. 15.—Finding a letter shoved under his door embodying a demand for $1,000 and threatening death to himself and wife if he failed to deposit the money at a designated spot, or death if they made the letter public, John Caston of Ossian, ten miles north of here, notified Sheriff Lipkey. The latter, with deputies, Caston carrying a lantern, as directed, went to the place and deposited a dummy package. The blackmailers evidently had received warning and the sheriff's officers lay in wait several hours in vain.

Mrs. Louis Hite, 428 Outlen street, Danville, Ill., writes, Oct. 1st: "Foley's Kidney Pills started me on the road to health. I was treated by four doctors and took other kidney remedies but grew worse, and was unable to do my housework, and the doctor told me I only could live from two to six months. I am now so much better that I do all of my own work, and I shall be very glad to tell any one afflicted with kidney or bladder trouble the good results I received from taking Foley's Kidney Pills." Commence today and be well. Do not risk having Bright's Disease, or Diabetes. Sold by all druggists.

New Business For Cannon.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 15.—After failing to buy the South Bend franchise in the Central League and transfer it to Danville, Ill., Uncle Joe Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, has now obtained the controlling interest in the Danville team. The deal has been proceeding for a number of weeks.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and break up your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Sold by all druggists.

Japan Buys East China Railway. St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—M. Kokovtsov, Russian minister of finance, who went to Manchuria to negotiate with Japan about railways, has sold the East China railway to Japan for 30,000,000 roubles.

We're sorry if you've tried other medicines and they failed. As a last resort try Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. It's a simple remedy, but it's worked wonders, made millions well and happy. Purifies the blood, makes flesh and muscle, cleanses your system. Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Pierce Not Ready For Trial.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 16.—The attorneys for H. Clay Pierce of the Waters-Pierce Oil company will ask for another continuance of the case against him. It is called for trial on Nov. 29.

Why get up in the morning feeling blue,
Worry others and worry you;
Here's a secret between you and me,
Better take Rocky Mountain Tea.
Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.
